Cliffhanger! The climber holding on for his life during a risky rescue! How close to those helicopter blades come to the rock wall? From ABC news, world headquarters, this is ABC World News with Diane Sawyer reporting tonight Elizabeth Vages! Next tonight, the risky rescue to save a climber holding on for dear life on the side of a cliff. The helicopter dangerously closed to the rocks! ABC's Neil Karlinski shows us how they pulled it off.

Even for this elite unit from this Snohomish County helicopter rescue team near Seattle, it was a jarring sight! The man stuck high up on a sheer rock face holding on for a dear life! The man had called 911 for help. But when they told him a rescue team could take hours, he said he couldn't hold on much longer! So the helicopter made a daring approach! With just 10 feet between the rotors and a mountain called Chair Pick, it was a white knuckle parking job to hover in position and lower a rescue climber. "There is not much room! But get me down there, and we'll see how this work!" The man appeared to have no safety equipments, something called Free Climbing that we saw up close recently with the world's best, Alex Honnold. He climbs vertical towers, rope-less, equal parts, beautiful and terrifying. In this case, the rescue climber reaches the man warn him not to reach out to him and removes his backpack. He then, straps him into a harness before the two are hoisted straight up on to the helicopter! There is no audio onboard, but the man's face, one big exhale of relief says it all! Later on solid ground, a handshake of thanks for saving his life and a day on the mountain he'll never forget! Neil Karlinski, ABC news, Seattle. Wow!
