And a close call tonight, after Harrison Ford piloting his own plane coming dangerously close to a 737. Mistaking the taxiway for the runway? This is ABC World News Tonight with David Mur. Harrison Ford scare. A dangerous incident in the sky and an FAA investigation. From NBC news, world headquarters in New York, this is NBC Nightly News with Lester Holt. Tonight NBC news has learned the FAA is investigating a dangerous incident involving actor and pilot Harrison Ford who was involved in what some have called a close call in southern California yesterday when Ford mistook a taxiway for a runway, flying right over the top of an American Airline's jet. Our aviation correspondent Tom Costello broke the story and has our report.

Harrison Ford may be best known for his acting, but he is also an accomplished pilot. Tonight, the FAA is investigating a serious and potentially dangerous incident yesterday involving Ford and his single Husky and an American Airline's passenger plane in Orange County California. Aviation sources tell NBC news, Ford had been cleared to land on the short runway at John Wayne Airport Runway 20 left. But instead, he lined up and landed on the parallel taxiways, C or Charlie where planes taxi before takeoff.

In a process, the flew right over the top of an American Airline 737 that was holding at the end of a taxi before preparing for departure. Flight 1456 was loaded with the 110 passengers and 6 crew members for a flight to Dallas. Unclear if anybody onboard knew what happened. Once on the ground, Mr. Ford radioed air traffic control "Was that airliner meant to be underneath me?" The controller told Ford he hadn't landed on the runway, instead you landed on taxiway C to which Ford replied I landed on C. Landing on a taxiway is a clear FAA violation. The question tonight, was Ford distracted? It was just 2 years ago that Ford was injured when his World War Two airplane crash landed on a Santa Monica golf course. Investigators later blamed the crash on an engine failure. Tonight Harrison is declining to comment. Experts say he could receive a warning letter or have his pilot's license suspended, though that seems less likely. Tom Costello NBC News, Washington.
