CBS this morning continues in a moment, I am Anne Mary Green with a look beyond this morning's headlines. 50 years ago, singer Otis Redding's last recording topped the Billboard Charts. Anthony Mason takes a look at the back story of "Sitting on the Bay"

At the Monterey Pop Festival in 1967, Otis Redding shook the music world and ignited his career in America. But his biggest hit was still to come. "How did he approach you with Dock of the Bay? Well, he called me from the airport" Steve Croper, Redding's writing partner was at Stax Studios in Memphis that November. "He said, I got a hit, I'm comin' right down" How long did you take for you to finish writing? That after afternoon, it was done!" "Sitting in the morning sun" 50 years today, Croper was getting ready to overdub some guitar licks to the track when Redding came by. "And the last time I saw Otis, he popped his head in the door and said, I'll see you Monday. And I said, Great,"

That weekend, Redding's private plane crashed outside Madison Wisconsin, killing the singer and five others. Redding was 26. "And I said I just lost my friend. He was your best friend!" The label rushed to release an Otis Redding song. Croper was sent into the studio to put the finishing touches on Dock of the Bay. "I started on a Tuesday morning and I handed it to a flight attendant on a Wednesday morning that was headed to La Guardia. "Sitting on the Bay" became the first posthumous number one record on the Billboard Charts and won Redding and Grapor the Grammy. "There is a message in there that pretty hits everybody" "Just to make this dock my home" and became his epitaph. We never forget Otis Redding. "Sitting on the Bay, wasting time" Anthony Mason CBS news, Nashville.
