And why do you do that? It's just right thing to do!" This is the CBS evening news with Jeff Glor. We end the week with Steve Hartman and what everyone can learn from a 4 year old. He is faster than a speeding stroller, more adorable than a wet kitten, and able to get a stranger's attention with a single courtesy. "Excuse me!" This is America's latest superhero "Don't forget to show love" and the only superhero with the power to feed the homeless. "Why do you do that? It's just right thing to do" By day, Austin Perine is a mild-mannered 4-year-old from Birmingham, Alabama. But about once a week, he turns into this alter ego: "Would you like a sandwich?" A superhero set on feeding as many homeless people as possible. "President Austin. President Austin. President Austin." "That's his idea of what the president is supposed to do, I was like, buddy, you have no idea, but hey, I'm going along with it."

TJ says this all began when they were watching a TV show about pandas. It showed a mama panda abandoning a baby. TJ told his son the cub was now homeless. "He says, 'What's homeless?' I said, 'It's when you don't have a home and sometimes you don't have mom or dad around are people home less'" "When I was 4 year old, I didn't care about helping people! I did! I see" Once Austin learned some people are homeless, and some are even hungry, he launched this caped crusade. Told his mom and dad that he wanted all his allowance and money they would spend on toys to go toward chicken sandwiches instead. "Oh, thank you baby. You're welcome. Don't forget to show love"

After he gives out each sandwich, he gives each person a same bit of advice. "Don't forget to show love" Don't forget to show love, he tells them, and most do, immediately. Raymont Boss says this kid gives him hope. "Don't forget to show love" Everyone who meets Austin leaves with hope. Which is why, with any luck, someday "President Austin" won't be a superhero anymore. He'll just be a president. Steve Hartman on the road in Birmingham, Alabama. Fantastic, Austin will be eligible to run for president in the 2052 election.
